Council OKs Dog Plan

A plan for settling some of the city's dog problems will be undertaken starting April 24, according to details explained by Councilman Lincoln Mondrik at a regular meeting of the council Tuesday evening.

The plan is to have a veterinarian, Mondrik representing the city, a dog catcher and a police officer make house to house calls all over town, yaccinating dogs, selling city dog tags, and picking up strays and unwanted canines for disposal.

Mondrik emphasized that the process would not be forced on anyone who refuses vaccination and tagging, but a notation would be made in each case for possible later violation of the dog ordinance.

Council approved the plan. Cost will be $3 for vaccination and $1 for a city dog tage.

In other business, council heard A. W. McCullin as chairman of the city planning commission report on the commission's recommendations for streets, park, and sewers.

On streets, the commission recommended that paving of streets in the residential areas should have priority, and listed "gatherer" streets which should be paid for by the city, with property owners paying for curb and gutter.

On street parking, it was advised by a highway department engineer that parking on some downtown streets should be at a 22 1/2 degree angle to allow enough room in the center of the streets for easy flow of traffic. Parallel parking was advised for some portion of the downtown streets.

The commission is also recommending construction of a new municipal building. McCullin showed plans for such a building to replace the present city hall.

Mayor Gene Blake told the council that there have been a number of calls about the $3,000 exemption for property owners who are 65 or over and said the city would have to determine what tax income would be lost in the event the exemption was granted. He said a number of cities have granted the exemption and it may become mandatory.

After the mayor and Councilmen Mondrik and Ernest Moore were sworn in, Blake recommended that Bob Clark be reappointed mayor pro tem; E. A. Bigbee, fire marshal; Monroe Bruedigan, fire chief; Ed Magre, city attorney; and Bob Ellett, city judge. Council approved the appointments.

Blake also recommended that a letter of appreciation be sent to former Councilman Lester Turner, who served for nearly 11 years.

Other appointments included those of E. L. Wied, William Kelm, J. D. Moore, and W. G. Dase Jr. to the Cameron Housing Authority.

And council approved the first reading of an ordinance for a traffic light at 4th and Fannin, to be installed and maintained by the Texas Highway Department.

Pavers to the right of us! Pavers to the left of us! On rode the city drivers. . . .

Apologies to author of "Charge of the Light Brigade."

And considerable thanks for the fast close on the downtown paving jobs on street, alley and parking areas.

But it won't be long now, if some miniature car doesn't go squash beneath a roller or a parked car isn't outlined in asphalt where it sets, forgotten and unmovable.

The sunny weather has brought on the final stroke of the downtown brush, the resurfacing of those sandy streets to a welcome black macadam.

Two school districts in the Bell County area oppose consolidations.

Seaton defeated a consolidation with Rogers by voting it down in the grade-school district while Rogers had only 2 votes against it.

And Moffat School District has filed suit to void a decision by Bell County School Board allowing Belton to annex the Moffat district.

The struggle of small districts continues in the face of rising school costs, predictably better instruction in a larger, but not super large district.

Is it schools or taxes? Or both?

It could be local pride, a grade school or small 12-grade system the last vestige of community focus and organization.

In such cases, however, the reason for schools in the first place may be given last consideration. It's easy to turn away from real progress with reasoning like: "It was good enough for me and it's good enough for them."

In the smallest schools in 1974, is it?

Farmers Benefit From Extended REAP Program

Milam County farmers and ranchers will benefit from the recently reinstated Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP) with the county ASCS office handling the program locally.

Douglas Buck, ASCS director, said funds for the program were obtained in March and applications have been filed for most of the allocated funds. He said some funds have been held back for applications to be taken later this year.

Buck explained that his office handles two programs under environmental protection -- the REAP program, for projects to be carried out within a year, and an LTA, or long term agreement, that can be carried for three to ten years . Signup date for the LTA program will be announced later, Buck said.

Under the 1973 program the local REAP program had funds obligated totaling $75,000 . Under the 1974 program some $19,000 was available with the ASCS hoping for $10,000 more this year.

FBI Closes Enquiry Into $12,000 Hearne Check

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is no longer investigating Hearne's controversial $12,000 check, since the agency was called in at the request of Cong. W. R. Poage, whose name was at first linked to the check.

Carl Stefansson, assistant agent in charge of the FBI office at San Antonio, told The Herald that his office had determined that there is no federal violation in the case, and they are no longer investigating the matter.

Poage's name was linked to the check, which was written three years ago, by the Hearne city bookkeeper, who told of the check to a Houston television station last month. She said that Hearne Mayor Jake Abrams told her the check was for Poage's campaign fund.

Abrams later apologized to Poage for linking his name to the check, which was made out to a non-existent engineering firm and deposited in a Bryan bank.

Poage called for a federal investigation into the matter.

A Robertson County grand jury has since indic ted the Hearne mayor and four councilmen after hearings held in March, charging them with misapplication of funds and conspiracy.

Since that time, the mayor has resigned, the city bookkeeper has been fired by the city manager, who was in turn fired by the city council.

A mystery still lingers about who got the $12,000. A client of City Atty. Bill Palmos gave him $12,000 which was deposited by Palmos to the city of Hearne's general fund and the deposit slip sent to the city. Palmos declined to name his client.

Seaton Voters Defeat School Consolidation

Voters in Seaton defeated a consolidation proposal Saturday by a vote of 137 to 63, said Seaton election judge J. D. Chlapek, while voters in Rogers voted for the consolidation proposal by a vote of 108 to 2.

Seaton will continue to operate its own four-room school as part of the Bell County School system.

For the two districts to be consolidated, the proposal would have had to pass in both districts, said Bell County School Supt. Conally Neal.

The election was called after a federal court in Tyler ruled that transferring school children from one district to another could not offset the racial balance of either district by more than one percent.

After the Rogers district was notified by the Texas Education Agency late in 1973 that the court order would be enforced strictly and that most students transferring into Rogers would be forced to return to their parent school districts, several parents of Seaton elementary students petitioned the Bell County school board unsuccessfully in January to annex the Seaton school to the Rogers district.

While the board refused to do so, it received a petition to put the question of a merger of the two districts to a vote.

The board said citizens of both districts should submit petitions. The petitions were submitted, and county commissioners called the Saturday election.

Presently, about 40 Seaton students transfer to schools in neighboring districts, most of them to Rogers.

Seaton School, which now is the only common school remaining in Bell County, teaches only kindergarten through eighth grade.

Common schools are those which do not have a high school and are supervised by the county superintendent. Until 1947, Bell County had 28 common schools, but all have been annexed to other districts except Seaton.

Final Service Set For Old Buckholts Church

A final 10:15 a.m. worship service will be held in the sanctuary of Hope Lutheran Church, Buckholts, on Sunday, April 21.

The 49-year-old , Gothic designed, wood frame building will be razed in preparation for the new sanctuary to be erected on the same site. A contract with Neil Pearcy and Willis Carter of Temple will be signed shortly.

Planning for the new sanctuary has been in progress for several years but was intensified last November when the architectural firm of Danze and Davis of Austin was employed to draw up plans for the new church.

According to Danze, working drawings should be complete by the middle of May, when bids for construction can be opened.

Pastor Ervie E. Braun said, "If all goes as planned, and the removal of the present structure is complete, beginning of construction could occur as early as July, 1974.

"During the interim, the congregation will worship in the Education Building behind the present sanctuary, temporarily using some of the furnishings of the old sancturary."

The events of Sunday, April 21, will be the service of thanksgiving conducted by Pastor Braun, followed by a congregational potluck dinner. A cordial invitation is extended to all who may wish to share that day with the Hope Lutheran congregation.

Russian Robots May Be Used To Harvest Frozen Resources

By Vincent Buist

MOSCOW

Reuter -- A leading economist here says that Soviet scientists have been commissioned to design robots which will help man extract natural wealth from the wastes of northern Siberia.

After over a century's continuous exploitation, some of the mineral deposits in the European part of the country are nearing exhaustion -- and extraction costs are rising.

But thousands of miles east, beyond the Urals, locked up in the deep frozen Arctic soil of northern Siberia lies vast mineral wealth -- oil, gas, gold, platinum and metals of all kinds, to say nothing of diamonds and gigantic timber reserves.

In the next 15-20 years, many Russians, especially young ones, will have to trek into the harsh northern and eastern climates of this vast country. Their job will be to feed the furnaces of industry with the raw materials needed to satisfy the hopes of planners and ideologists who see this country moving into an even stronger position in the world because of its mammoth natural resources.

But the north is an area where little grows except stunted shrubs and brown grass. The frozen surface thaws into a mosquito-ridden quagmire in the brief Arctic summer and houses have to be built on stilts -- to anchor their foundations safely in the frozen subsoil.

According to Eyodor Kotov, a senior official at the Soviet State planning office in Moscow, Soviet scientists are now studying the feasibility of robots to help Soviet workers -- or replace them -- in manning future plants built in the Arctic northern territories.

Kotov says that conditions in the northern territories are so harsh that Soviet workers should not be expected to spend long periods of their lives there.

"Robots should work there permanently, man should not be permanent," he says.

Research scientists in many Soviet institutes are already at work designing the Siberian robot of the future, sayd Kotov.

Their research is controlled under a 15-year master plan for the development of the Soviet economy in the period of 1976 - 1998.

Almost all Soviet scientists and technicians in institutes throughout the country are in some way connected with the master 15-year plan.

Some are estimating how much protein the Soviet man and woman of 1998 will need. Others are charting population statistics to arrive at the best possible estimate of how many there will be to feed in the year 1990 -- and how many will be in the warm south and how many in the inhospitable north.

One or two branches are gazing at educational requirements and trying to decide how many Soviet scientists will be needed to tend the new branches of the machine industry which will concentrate on robot production in the coming era -- how many mathematicians, engineers, computer programming specialists.

Apart from the awesome problem of maintaining a shifting population in the frozen north the planners in Moscow have to cope with a squeeze on manpower which will reach its worst stage in 1980 - 85 in the middle of the 15-year plan.

This is the first time in Soviet history that the planners have been able to formulate a true, coherent and organic 15-year plan. Previously the state of the Soviet economy forbade such an ambitious project.

But now scientists in all areas are fixing norms for life in 1990 and then working by back projection down to the present day to determine in what direction science and industry must develop -- and what materials will be needed -- to satisfy state demands by the last year of the plan.

"A special branch of industry is to be set up in the Soviet Union to design, test and produce robot prototypes," says Kotov.

It's possible, he says, that conditions in the north will prove so harsh that men will only spend a limited period there each year.

The Soviet hope is that robots -- and this includes all kinds of automated and programmed machines -- will be able to make good the human deficiency.

Stepchild Long Enough...

The City of Cameron ultimately will have to establish a parks board to keep things tidy in the downtown mall area, Wilson-Ledbetter and City Park, beyond the grounds of Cameron Public Library.

The planning commission met with technical people the other day to advise on plantings, contour, trees and recreational equipment for youngsters.

You know us. So we won't hesitate to suggest that the City consider putting in some tennis courts in City Park along the north side, vacant of anything and big enough for several courts.

Yoe High School's courts got a few new poles and new chicken wire and tennis nets, which vastly improved sagging facilities there. But two courts and a parttime third simply are not enough for a town of 6,000.

It is not true that we encourage lining off tennis courts on every paved street in Cameron. But it is true the game is as popular among adults as golf, if not more so, and that kids from 9 through 18 play the game here by the dozens. It would be by the greater numbers with adequate facilities.

We congratulate the planners for getting to the task of beautifying existing park areas. And a parks board will be next on the city organizational agenda.

Tennis has been a stepchild long enough in sports development. Check almost any park program anywhere in Texas and you'll find tennis courts and tennis centers abound.

Why not Cameron too?

Books And Culture...

We join in inviting Cameronites to Sunday open house at Cameron Public Library during National Public Library Week.

An exhibition of local adult and children's art is scheduled. The open house will be from 3 to 5 p.m.

Your Herald encourages readers, students and library friends to visit Cameron Public Library that afternoon.

It is further recognition of the value of books and culture in a community where so much of today's progress began with the 1966 completion of the structure.

Fabled Timbuctoo Still Stands Almost Untouched

By Bernard Edinger

TIMBUCTOO Reuter -- This fabled "Forbidden City of the Sahara Desert" today stands almost untouched by the 20th century, one of the last legendary faraway places where exoticism still reigns unchallenged.

Tucked away in the sands of the southern Sahara, Timbuctoo's rythmic and magical name is still a powerful magnet for lovers of the mysterious and the unknown.

As recently as the start of the 19th century, no westerner had penetrated its narrow, dusty streets still bordered today by windowless grey mudbrick walls.

The first to do so, British Indian Army Major Alexander Gordon Laing, paid with his life.

Disguised as a nomad, he remained in the town for a month in 1826. A plaque to his memory, put up by the Royal African Scoiety, can be seen on the house where he stayed.

According to the colorful but probably highly inaccurate version told here, Laing was discovered and his throat was slit when he was seen one day urinating in a standing position rather than crouching in the manner of the desert people.

The first European to come out of Timbuctoo alive and tell about it was Frenchman Rene Caillie whose early two-year stay in 1827 1828, and that later of German explorer Heinrich Barth, were to spread the myth of Timbuctoo and fire imaginations around the world.

Until the end of the 16th century, Timbuctoo had been a city of great wealth, a commercial center for the region and a high place of Islamic learning.

To prevent nomade from looting the town's riches, entrance to what was then referred to as "The Pearl of the Desert," was barred to foreigners and remained so long after Timbuctoo's decline.

Today most of the 15,000 townspeople are Black Songhai Moslems whose economy of trading and small business has been hard hit by the West African drought.

Since the town is a crossroads for a camel caravan, one occasionally meets caravaneers, sometimes called "the sons of the clouds" because they drive their camels along the raingiving clouds from the Atlantic coast to the heart of the desert.

Lke the Tuareg nomads, who have now been sheltered in a nearby refugee camp since their cows and goats died from the drought, they wear th flowing blue indigo robes which earn both groups the name of "Blue Men of the Sahara."

Their faces nearly completely covered with winding blue cloth to counter the sand, they can be seen with their camels at the market place among spices, strong smells -- and swarms of flies.

For the tourist who come to Timbuctoo there is a Beau Geste type fortress hotel with narrow windows to keep out the merciless "harmattan," the hot winds which blow most of the year.

Temperatures can reach 120 degrees during the early summer but the evenings are pleasant and travelers usually sit on the hotel's out door terrace to watch the glorious desert sunsets. Inevitably the hotel draws visitors as exotic as the town itself.

Seated at the bar recently were an Italian painter from Venice "roughing it" across Africa and two American civilian pilots, hard-bitten men who counted flying hours in five figures and look straight out a a Hollywood melodrama.

Reaching Timbuckoo can be quite an adventure itself.

If water is regularly found along the way, the trip will only take four weeks

It's Show And Tell Time For Political Candidates

It's show and tell time for political candidates, and many of them don't have as much to show as they would like to for their fund-raising efforts.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe ran second to Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Granberry in campaign spending up to March 25, according to the first contribution-spending reports filed with the secretary of state.

Granberry reported contributions and loans of $171,425 (including $22,500 of his own money) and spending of $171,425 since last summer when he began his race.

Briscoe's spending -- including a $120,000 loan of his own money -- was pegged at $153,754.

Frances "Sissy" Farenthold reported some $40,865 in expenditures and debts.

The effort is far below that of 1972 when Briscoe spent nearly $1.6 million in the primaries, and Mrs. Farenthold spent $672,441.

Comptroller Candidate Bob Bullock has reported spending of about $60,000 in his Democratic race, and Hugh Edubrg said he has outlays of about $12,900.

Edburg acknowledged he is using about $7,000 of his own money. Bullock said he has used $12,600 from his own resources, and has $38,300 in loans from his business partner, Ken Wendler of Austin.

One of the big-spending groups so far has been the Texas Citizens for Parimutuel Horse Racing, which reported a $7,000-cost campaign to get the issue of legalizing race track betting on primary ballots.

NEW CONVENTION GOAL -- With the Constitutional Convention in recess, President Price Daniel Jr. has a new goal: he is aiming to wind up the revision task by May 31.

Actually, he conceded the first or second week of June is a more realistic target.

Two of the toughest articles -- judiciary and general provisions (which includes the controversial right to work issue) -- remain to be debated when delegates return to Austin.

They must also vote again (and muster a two-thirds majority) on the seven articles approved tentatively so far, and then decide the form of submission of the constitution, and alternative proposals to voters.

PRISONER COLLEGE PLAN OFFERED -- Prison inmates at Ramsey Unit will be the first in the U.S. to be offered a chance at four-year college degrees through the University of Houston at Clear Lake City.

Junior college associate degrees have been available since 1965 through special programs.

Thirty-to-60 students will begin classes at Ramsey Unit in June. Next fall, Stephen F. Austin University is due to extend courses to inmates at Coffield Unit near Palestine.

"The more education a man has, the less likely he is to return to prison," said State Prison System Director W. J. Estelle.

CONTRACT AWARDED -- A contract for the first modernization of property tax laws since 1925 has been awarded by the Legislative Property Tax Committee.

Law Research Corporation of Texas, an Austin group, received the maximum $125,590 -- cost recodification contract.

LPTC abandoned a plan to conduct an intensive school property tax survey on a totally-random-selection basis. The 35 school districts will be re-selected to insure a geographic spread in five regions.

COURTS SPEAK -- Power of city governments to regulate extended area telephone rates was approved by the State Supreme Court.

The High Court turned down a Houston woman's appeal in a lawsuit in which she has unsuccessfully claimed $635,000 in damages against a doctor due to an unusually-large appendectomy scar.

The Court of Criminal Appeals reversed a San Saba murder conviction.

Murder confiction of a Dallas man who set fire to car in which another was asphyxiated lost an appeal from a life sentence.

Attorneys for former House Speaker Gus Mutscher, appealing a conviction for bribery conspiracy, argued before the Court of Criminal Appeals that no conspiracy was ever proved and the principal witness was not asked about it.

FAMILIES NOTIFIED -- A new state program offering toll-free telephone service has contacted 861 families, relaying messages on runaway children, Governor Briscoe reported

Since last September, Briscoe said, the program, "Operation Peace of Mind," has received 1,890 calls from runaways in 42 states. The national hotline enables the runaways to relay messages to their parents from a round-the clock, volunteer-manned center in Houston.

APPOINTMENTS -- Frank Hutchinson is new director of Minority Business Enterprise.

Robert A. Sartwelle of Houston was appointed by Governor Briscoe to the San Jacinto Historical Advisory Board.

Dann Barger of Brownwood is new superintendent of the Crockett State School.

Kraege Polan Jr., former aide to Speaker Price Daniel Jr., has joined the staff of Rep. Carl Parker of Port Arthur in his campaign for speaker.

Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale is a new member of the Education Commission of the States, a national organization of state leaders and educators.

MIGRANT OFFICE CREATED -- A Migrant Affairs Office and Migrant Fuel Allocation Plan for Texas were set up by executive order of the governor last week.

The MAC will act as liason with all agencies which serve migrant groups and try to identify present and future resources at federal, state and local levels to aid with problems.

The fuel program will permit migrants to obtain gasoline at 51 designated truck stops as they move north during agricultural seasons.

"PRIVATE" SUPERPORT ENDORSED -- A Senate committee endorsed private ownership of a Texas superport.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editor:

Everybody these days is trying to beat the high cost of living especially by, if he's in a position to do it, raising the price of what he has to sell and hollering to high heaven over the price of what he has to buy.

Since groceries are high on people's budget, if you count cosmetics, hose, cigarettes, lawn fertilizer and other such staples, there is a widespread rush over the country to plant a garden this year.

Recognizing this, and recognizing that a lot of big city dwellers don't have any ground for a garden, some smart guy, I read in the paper last night, has come up with a plan. He has leased a large tract of land just outside the city and is in turn sub-leasing small garden plots in it to city people trying to beat the high cost of food. Each plot leases for $160 a year and he tells his prospects it's possible to grow $1,500 worth of vegetables on it.

Now I don't want to discourage this, it would be a lot of city people good to get out in the country and find out what fresh air tastes like, but I'd advise them not to bank on growing $1,500 worth of food.

A garden looks splendid in a seed catalog but it's hard to duplicate it on the ground. It's like a movie actress. She looks better on the screen than she does in broad daylight.

Enthusiams when you first step onto your garden plot mounts steadily until you've finished breaking the first few square feet and your back is killing you. If you get it all spaded or plowed (you can get a garden tractor for $400 or $500) and planted there is another time of exhilaration when the plants first come up, dampened a little when you find out that for every vegetable there are 14 weeds. After you get it weeded you'll find there are more insects on this planet, Horatio, than man has dreampt of.

I could go on but I don't want to discourage the gardening movement. You can grow one if you work hard enough at it, but that's true, alas, of nearly any job. In the meantime, don't alienate your friendly groceryman.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Historic Pottery On Display

AUSTIN

Pottery made by ancestors of the historic Caddo Indians of northeast Texas is on display through May at Texas Memorial Museum.

Pottery of the type on exhibit goes back as early as 700 to 800 A. D. and up to the 18th Century.

The items were discovered in burial sites in the Tyler, Texarkana and Oklahoma border area. They include bowls, jars, pitchers and other vessels.

The "earthy" exhibit was prepared by art history graduate student Karen Watson of Dallas, to enhance the pottery, which has retained its earthen colors achieved with native clay, sand and red orchre.

Some of the vessels are ornately decorated with impressions and are very thin and delicate compared with modern-day pottery.

The 35 items on display are from a collection of the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory at UT's Balcones Research Center.

Texas Memorial Museum, at 24th and Trinity, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and is free to the public.

Grant To Support New Pest Control

A Texas Agricultural Experiment Station entomologist has received a $20,000 National Science Foundation grant to support a new pest control approach that would be both insect - specific and environmentally safe.

In charge of studies on "Neuroendocrine Regulation of Mitochondriogenesis in Insects" is Dr. Larry L. Kelley of the A&M University Entomology Department.

Although the project will focus on development of mitochondria -- the energy-making structures in animal cells -- considerable information is expected to be gathered on that insect phenomenon known as diapause.

Diapause, Keeley says, is a dormant state used by insects when they meet unfriendly conditions, cold weather for example. The condition is brought on by a halt in gland activity and reduction of overall body metabolism.

The entomologist is working with cockroacher (Blaberus discoidalis) in his effort to understand hormonal regulation of mitochondria and its relation to diapause.

"Diapause has potential for insect control," Keeley said. "If the diapause mechanism can be understood from the aspect of hormonal regulation of cel l metabolism and which metabolic processes are most sensitive to gland regulation, then we believe diapause can be artificially manipulated."

Which means, he added, if diapause can be withheld from certain troublesome bugs, then they will be done in by weather extremes and other natural obstacles.

Diapause finagling envisioned by Keeley would be done with materials called hormone - memetics.

"Such agents, or hormone - mimetics, would be restricted in their action to insects showing a diapause capacity, and therefore, be environmentally safe to non-target organisms," he explained.

Aggie Muster To Be Held At Milano

The 1974 Aggie Muster will be held Saturday April 20 at 7:30 p.m. at the Milano High School Lunchroom in Milano.

Rodger Miller, assistant to President Jack Williams of Texas A&M University will be the speaker. Miller served on the Battalion Staff the student newspaper at A&M; was a member of the Student Council while at A&M and prior to joining president Jack Williams staff was editor of Hamilton Herald News at Hamilton,

All Milam County A&M former students, spouses, guests and high school seniors interested in attending Texas A&M are invited to attend.

Grain Men Set Annual Convention

Grain and feed men in Texas will attend their annual convention at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas, Texas, April 18, 19, 20. Raymond R. Nolen, executive vice president of Texas Grain and Feed Association, reports pre-registration at an all time high with over 600 pre-registrations. Nolen expects attendance at the convention to be well over 800. Grain and feed men fromother states will also attend the convention.

Farmers have benefited from all time high on grain prices during this past year. At last they are receiving above parity for their grain. Feed manufacturers however, have received complaints from feeders for the high cost of feed originating from the high grain prices.

Feed firms had many problems during the past year, which they will be talking about during their convention.

FARM TESTED - Jet Bermudagrass, four months in the bale, green and growing. W. H. McCormick of Rogers hopes to introduce a Bermudagrass that will stay green all year. The Jet Bermuda was green until Dec. 18, and again January 18 -- 30 days of dormancy in a mild winter. Some 100 bales are on test at this time.

Screwworm Pests May Reach Record Numbers

MISSION

Livestock owners of the southwestern United States should redouble their efforts this spring to find, treat and prevent screwworm cases, since the livestock parasite is expected to reach record numbers due to the unusually mild winter just ended.

This warning comes from Dr. M. E. "Cotton" Meadows, Jr., director of the mission - based screwworm eradication program of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Meadows also cautioned producers to refrain from livestock surgery or other manmade wounds to prevent screwworm infestations.

"Thirty per cent of all laboratory confirmed cases so far in 1974 have been collected from manmade wodocking and the like), and every effort should be made to prevent wounding animals during the screwworm season," Meadows said.

The USDA veterinarian emphasized that the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association also solicits the cooperation of all livestock owners in an all-out effort to eliminate the screwworm fly. In a special resolution approved by the industry organization at its recent annual meeting in Dallas, all livestock owners of the southwest were urged to support the eradication effort by:

1. Inspecting their animals frequently.

2. Treating all wounds with an approved product.

3. Collecting and submitting worm specimens to the Screwworm Laboratory at Mission, Texas, for identification. Positive cases then can be given sterile fly treatment, officials reminded.

Screwworm cases are off to a fast start this spring, with 23 new Texas cases confirmed last week from counties as far north as Brown and Haskell. Others reporting first 1974 cases last week were Atascosa, Brooks, Frio, Jim Hogg, Willacy and Zavala.

Ginners Facing Problems

By Bill McCtuchen

Cotton gins face big problems this year.

Dr. Calvin Parnell, cotton ginning and mechanization specialist and Fred Elliott, cotton specialist, both with the Texas Agricultural Service visited in Milam County April 10.

The primary reason for the visit was to assist the Farmer's Co-op Gin manager, Doug Williams, with plans for increasing ginning efficiency and capacity. Parnell, Elliott and I were given a tour through the facility and Parnell made several useful suggestions toward updating the facilities.

Also visited ~~uring~~ the day was Milburn Beckhusen, at Modern Gin at Buckholts, and Hugo Aigner, chairman of the board of FB&M Co-op near Wilson.

Ginners are faced with problems in reworking gin presses to meet new standards, strict pollution control standards and meeting new rigid safety standards under OSHA.

Farmers on Roller Coaster . . . Red Meat Processing Down . . . Anti-Screwworms Plans Progress . . . Lack of Rain Reports Heard

THERE'S NO DOUBT that Texas farmers are better off than they used to be -- if you pick the right periods of time; and there's no doubt that they are worse off than they used to be—at other times.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says that the "All Farm Products Index of Prices Received" last March 15 was 543 per cent of the January, 1910-December, 1914 base. That is 34 points below the previous month of this year but 100 points (23 per cent) above a year ago.

On the other hand, the livestock products index was about eight per cent below February 1974 and 10 per cent below the same period last year, as any cattleman will testify. Beef cattle were down $3.40 a hundred from February and $5.60 below a year ago at $40.40 per hundred. Hogs at $33.20 a hundred were down $5.20 from February and $4 from a year ago.

PROCESSING OF RED MEAT was down during February 1974 in Texas. Slaughtering plants produced 160.9 million pounds during that month, which is 20 per cent lower than the 201.0 million pounds produced in January 1974 and four per cent below February 1973. February 1974 slaughter of cattle totaled 252,000 head, 65,000 head fewer than the previous month and 17,000 below February a year ago.

There were 569,000 head of cattle slaughtered during the first two months of this year; 214,500sheep and lambs were killed during the same two months. Sheep and lambs killed totaled 98,500 during February, which is 17,500 fewer than the month earlier and 2,000 more than in February 1973.

SCREWWORMS are showing up more frequently now in Mexico, it is reported. Slow help is on the way, however. Mexican and U.S. officials are reported by USDA to be negotiating with contractors for construction of the main facility in southern Mexico in which to produce more than 300 million sterile screwworm flies each week.

The production plant is supposed to be completed in 1975. The plan is to eradicate screwworms north of Tuxtla Gutierrez, Mexico, then to keep a permanent barrier of sterile flies across Mexico's narrow Isthmus of Tehuantepec to keep the pest from moving northward.

LACK OF RAIN is a drawback to farming in many parts of Texas, but progress is reported in planting in 1974 crops. Oats are reported doing well in the southern and eastern half of the State where moisture has been adequate.

Wheat is heading out from the Cross Timbers to South Texas and is in the boot stage on the Low Plains. Irrigated wheat is making good growth on the High Plains, and rains a couple of weeks ago helped some dryland wheat, but most dryland wheat has poor prospects.

Rice seeding is reported more than half completed, and cotton planting is about seven per cent complete over the State, all of it in South Texas. Peanut planting is underway in South Texas.

IF PECAN buds herald true spring weather, then such weather is here; because pecans are leafing in most South Texas areas and budding in other areas of the State.

Cattle Prices Due Rise

"All signs point toward an increase in the prices of both feeder and fat cattle by April or May," believes a livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Feeder cattle prices should reach last year's levels while Choice slaughter steer prices should move up to the $48-$50 range, contends Dr. Ed Uvacek.

"The high price for the year may not be much higher than that, and some downward pressure is highly probable thereafter."

In analyzing the present problem of low prices to producers, the Texas A&M University System specialist points to overfat cattle in feedlots, the trucking strike, fuel shortages, retailers lowering wholesale prices in order to widen margins, and past government controls as having a hand in depressing an already weak market.

"Neither oversupply of beef nor a lack of consumer demand caused the low price levels of the last month," Uvacek says. "Slaughter of cattle was off one per cent in January and four per cent in February, yet prices fell drastically. On the other hand, retail beef prices in January were up 17 per cent from a year ago and six per cent above the December 1973 level.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

Sometimes it's not until spring that homeowners realize they have been harboring some pests that are not only unpleasant, but that can do extensive damage to their homes. Often, these pests are termites or wood-boring beetles.

Attorneys for our Environmental Protection Division, which represents the Texas Structural Pest Control Board, say that persons who have found evidence of bugs, or who suspect their home may harbor such pests, are prime candidates for the unscrupulous pest control operator.

The Structural Pest Control Board reminds consumers that all exterminators or pest control companies must be licensed by the Board to operate in one or all of the following five categories: (1) Termites and wood - destroying organisms. (2) pests such as roaches, ants, fleas in the home, (3) fumigation, (4) lawn and ornamental spraying, and (5) weed control.

Not only must every company be licensed, but every serviceman working for a company must carry an identifying card.

One favorite method of operation for an unscrupulous exterminator is deliberately to pick a neighborhood in which many older persons live.

Then they go door-to-door and offer free inspections. Usually they will "inspect" under the house or in the attic where the elderly person is less likely to go, come back with stories of termite or other pest infestation, and report that extensive structural damage has resulted.

For a fee that may range as high as thousands of dollars, they offer to get rid of the pests and repair the damage. In many instances, pests are found not to have been present, and no structural damage has taken place.

In one case in the Structural Pest Control Board's files, a widow who had inherited $30,000 claimed to have been taken by an unscrupulous exterminator for $29,000.

An added variation on this method of operation sometimes comes when the consumer balks at paying any more money for repeat calls. Another person then calls on him claiming to be an attorney for the company, an owner, or even a policeman or other investigator.

The person claims that the pest control employees had been found to be misleading customers and were fired by the company. As restitution to the consumer, he offers a company check for some amount in excess of what the consumer had lost.

When the customer protests that the amount is more than he paid, the representative tells him that he can give the company his check for the difference. The company check is worthless and the consumer has lost even more money.

My attorneys say it is a good idea to ask to see the license or serviceman's card of any home solicitor for pest control companies. If the person is reluctant to produce such identification, or says he doens't have it with him, be suspicious.

New Uniform Meat Identity Program at Safeway

You'll notice changes in some of the names on meat labels in our cases. We have adopted a new program under which meat retailers will use uniform names for the different cuts of meat they sell. In addition to helping you identify cuts, the plan also aids in selecting proper cooking methods. If, for example, the label shows a cut to be a steak or roast from Beef Loin or Beef Rib, dry heat cooking methods such as roasting, broiling and frying are recommended. For most other beef, moist cooking methods such as braising or cooking in liquid are recommended. Some tender cuts of beef not marked Loin or Rib may be cooked with dry heat but it is best to check your cookbook on these.

Food Preservation Programs Set

A symposium on home food preservation will be held in four locations in Milam County next week sponsored by the Milam County Family Living Sub-committee and the Milam County Extension Service.

Mrs. Chris Holcombe, county extension agent, said the series is planned for both the beginner who has never done any food preservation and for the homemaker who is experienced in food preservation.

"Improved methods of home canning and freezing make it more enjoyable for the homemaker to preserve the natural goodness of foods," Mrs. Holcombe said. "With today's interest in gardening there is even more interest in canning, freezing, pickling and jam and jelly making."

The symposium is open to the public and free of charge. The same program will be given at each of the following locations: April 23, 4 p.m. at the Cameron Community Center; 2 p.m. April 25 at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Thorndale; 3 p. m. April 24 at the Buckholts School homemaking department; and 8 p.m. April 25 at the New Salem Home Demonstration Club House in Fair Park, Rockdale.

The symposium will include information on canning and freezing fruits and vegetables; pickles and relishes; preserves; jams, jellies and marmalade.

"The season for fruits and vegetables is just around the corner," Mrs. Holcombe said. "Come to the meeting in your area so you can learn and be ready to conserve your surplus fruits and vegetables at the peak of quality. With inflation and the need for stretching the food dollar, this is a way to make your dollars go further and have high-quality food for your family.

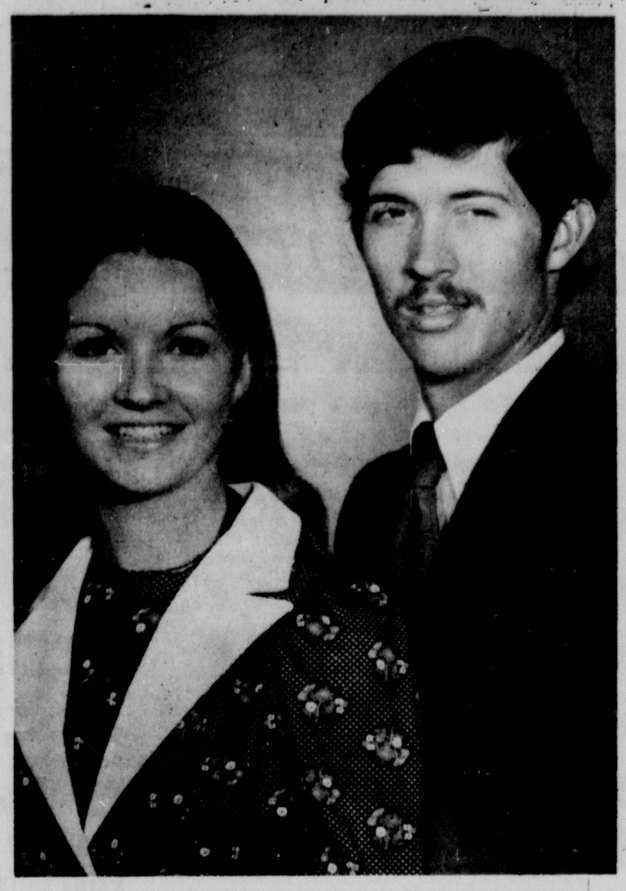
SWU Presents 'Celebration'

The final production of the 1973-74 theatrical season for the Mask and Wig Players at Southwestern University will be the musical "Celebration" by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, on Thursday and Friday, Apr. 25 and 26, at 7:30 p.m. and on Saturday, Apr. 27 at 2:30 p.m. in the Alma Thomas Theatre.

Acclaimed as one of the most original and exciting shows to hit the American musical stage, the play pulls the audience back onto the prehistoric, religious origins of the theatre -- a reminder of how mankind stifled ancient fears by gathering around a fire and making up rites to scare away the winter and celebrate the renewal of life.

Directing this production is Fred Goodson with musical direction by Dr. George Nelson, both of the faculty in the School of Fine Arts at Southwestern University.

The cast includes Ted Giles of Houston, a junior majoring in theatre, Bill Gentner of San Antonio, freshman, Dee Ella Spears of Lake Jackson, a junior majoring in theatre, and Dr. Angus Springer, chairman for the past 30 years of the theatre and speech department in the School of Fine Arts at Southwestern University.



ENGAGED - Mrs. Joyce Ann Rhodes of Freeport, Texas, and Mr. Roy B. Rhodes of Pasadena, Texas, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Sue Ann, to Dean A. Prokisch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie E. Prokisch of Cameron. The wedding will take place June 15 at the First Baptist Church in Cameron.

Make At Home Almond Ice Cream

This Almond Brittle Ice Cream is a scrumptious dessert that can't be bought in any store. Refreshing and not too rich, it's perfect for any spring or summer occasion.

You won't find ground almonds in many stores, but you can easily prepare them yourself. Grind whole shelled almonds — or coarsely chopped, slivered or sliced almonds — a few at a time, in an electric blender or a food chopper with a fine blade. Use natural almonds (almonds that have not been blanched) for deeper color and more pronounced flavor, or blanched almonds for a more subtle taste.

Almond Brittle Ice Cream

½ cup ground natural or blanched almonds
½ cup sugar
¼ cup margarine, softened
1 quart vanilla ice cream
½ teaspoon almond extract

Combine almonds and sugar in heavy saucepan or skillet; stir over low heat until sugar melts and almonds turn a golden brown. Turn out onto foil; cool. Wrap foil around brittle and smash into crumbles. Mix with margarine and almond extract; chill. Allow ice cream to soften slightly; stir in brittle mixture; freeze. Makes 1 quart.

Blood Visit Nets 143 Units At Alcoa

The second largest turnout in history highlighted the 42nd semi-annual visit of the Central Texas Red Cross Bloodmobile to Alcoa's Rockdale Works last week. The 143 units donated were only three short of a two-year old record, according to plant officials. The bloodmobile operates out of the Central Texas Red Cross headquarters in Waco.

Many accounts have built up to unusually high levels over the years, including Jim Tom Terry's. He came away from the most recent blood drawing only one pint short of five gallons. Another Alcoan, George Hollas, recorded his fourth gallon.

"We had great participations during this visit," said Nelson Mueller, plant safety and health administrator. "Many employees made a special effort to give, including some who came out before shift change, some who were off that day and some who were on graveyard shift who went home and came back to give."

Black Baptists Rap Gambling

DALLAS

The leaders of four Black Texas Baptists groups Wednesday issued a joint letter urging defeat of the May 4 referendum on legalized gambling.

The presidents of the four groups issuing the statement are Dr. M. L. Price of the Missionary Baptist General Convention of Texas, the Rev. Caesar Clark of the Baptist Missionary and Education State Convention, and the Rev. T. E. George, Jr. of the Texas Baptist State Convention.

The four groups represent more than 1500 churches with more than a half million members.

In the statement -- which was mailed to each of the congregations affiliated with the convention -- the pastors said:

"We call upon every black pastor to join us in this statement and lead our people to vote against the referendum on legalized gambling.

"It is those who can least afford to gamble who would be at the biggest losers in any system of state - approved gambling. We care about people and know that those who are trapped in a cycle of poverty are the very persons who would most easily be victimized by the lure of 'something for nothing.'"

The four presidents also noted they "join in an alliance against the evil of legalized gambling."

The statement added: "We do not need more crime in our communities and we know that a gambling fever produces a climate for crime."

Dr. Price also noted; "Gambling is detrimental to the welfare of every man, especially the poor man. I feel the Christian thing for all pastors to do is to urge their members to vote against gambling of all forms."

Texans will ballot in a "straw vote" on legalized parimutuel gambling May 4 in the Democratic and Republican primaries.

Table Idea

Telephone, electric and cable television companies often discard empty wooden or metal spools used for storing wire. These various-sized spools can be painted and used for handy round tables. Or, stack several into a tier table, suggests Anna Marie Gottschalk, housing and home furnishing specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

he is Risen
Clouds . . . and Light . . . and a bold spire! The symbols of man's wondering—his hope—his aspirations.
On a Friday the One they called Christ was dead. The world rolled on . . . nothing seemed changed.
Then it was Sunday: Newness everywhere! He is risen! Men believe . . . gather . . . rejoice . . . promise.
He is Risen! Clouds break. Light shines in darkness. Our faith reaches upward . . . in bold certainty!

Park Service Readies Plans To Save Energy

HOUSTON

Detailed plans to help Americans visit national parks with a minimum use of gasoline and other forms of energy are being developed by all 298 National Park Service areas, the American Automobile Association reports.

AAA says some of the plans, designed to reduce fuel consumption and private auto traffic in the parks, are already in effect.

Horsedrawn vehicles serve visitors to the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historic Site in Texas, minitrains carry visitors to widely spaced points of interests in Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado, and shuttle buses are in use at a number of other sites, including Yosemite Valley in California, the Shark Valley area of Everglades National Park, Mount McKinley National Park in Alaska, and Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

At Grand Canyon, an expanded bus fleet of 12 vehicles will serve the west rim when the tourist season moves into full swing this Spring.

Some energy saving devices are new, like the electric bus being tested in the National Capital Parks to provide quiet, pollution - free travel in Washington, D. C.

An older method is represented by a fleet of pre-1937 buses that are used in Glacier National Park to move visitors over the road from Lake McDonald to Logan Pass -- a road too narrow for modern vehicles.

AAA says the park service is working with the Department of Transportation and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to offer mass-transit links between the railroads and the New York Gateway recreation areas, and to extend the existing tourmobile service in Washington's National Capital Parks.

Financial Aid To Extend To Students

A helping hand, in the form of $400,000 in scholarships and grants - in - aid, will be extended to academically qualified but culturally and economically disadvantaged Texas students wishing to attend the University of Texas at Austin.

The UT System Board of Regents appropriated the sum, which will be expended at $100,000 a year for the next for years.

A recent study shows that the average Black or Chicano student at UT Austin now receives almost four times as much financial help as the average white student, pointing up the greater need for aid for students from ethnic minorities.

UT Center Devoted To Middle East

As more of the world's eyes focus on the Middle East, University of Texas Students have the advantage of the only large center devoted to Middle Eastern studies within 1,000 miles of Austin.

Through UT's interdisciplinary Center for Middle Eastern Studies, 57 Middle Eastern courses are taught each semester to about 3,000 students.

The UT Center emphasizes the modern rather than the historical Middle East, and includes study of four cultural groups -- Turks, Persians, Arabs and Israelis. UT library resources for Middle Easterm studies have grown to 62,500 volumes.

Swap Meet Planned At Pate Museum

The Second Annual South Central Swap Meet will be held April 25-28 on the grounds of the Pate Museum of Transportation. Bob Keasler of Fort Worth, president of the South Central Swap Meet Association, states that this year's meet will be far greater than 1978. The 1973 meet consisted of over 200 vendors and more than 10,000 visitors.

Vendors come from all over the U. S. to peddle their wares.

A swap meet is where vendors gather to sell or trade car parts to antique car buffs. Some even sell whole cars. It is staged just like the Canton, Texas Trade Day. Spaces are provided each vendor.

The South Central Meet Association is made up of antique car clubs across Texas. They are the Antique Automobile Club, Horseless Carriage Club, Model "A" Ford Club, Model "A" Restorers Club, Early V-8 Ford Club, and the Cadillac - LaSalle Club. The association has plans of this meet being the largest in the U. S. It is already the largest in the South.

Vendors may purchase space for the four-day meet by contacting Bob Thomas, 1802 Walworth, Greenville, Texas. Visitors are admitted free and may tour the Pate Museum as well as attend the swap meet. Gates will be open dawn to dusk.

Job Corps Near Home

Unskilled, out-of-work 16 to 21-year-olds in this region are now receiving Job Corps training near their homes.

Parents and friends of the trainees are finding it easier to keep in close contact with their young men and women who are taking advantage of the Job Corps program.

Under the new regional assignment plan approved by the U. S. Department of Labor, trainees who are recruited in this southwest region stay in their home area for training. Students from other sections of the country are placed in a center in their region.

Many students, recruited through state employmentt offices, will be given a second chance at building a productive life through training at one of the centers operated by the Texas Educational Foundation, Inc. (TEF).

Carlen's Foot In Mouth?

Jim Carlen, Texas Tech's football coach, has not been accused yet of an inability to talk. In other words, the fellow some Tech students not too delicately dubbed "West Texas Fats", can turn a phrase at the drop of a hat.

And, he does.

But, like most Big Talkers, Carlen is sometime postulating when he should have been listening. Like a couple years ago, when he went into a tirade about, "Stifling Austin heat," after UT turned a ballyhooed "Game-of-the year" into a 28-0 Tech defeat. Big Jim didn't say it and clam up. He made a big production, actually telling the Media that heat, and not Texas did in his team.

One enterprising fellow checked Lubbock's weather during Texas-Game Preparation and discovered that Tech had worked out in virtually the same temperature range as the Longhorns in Austin.

Now, Carlen's apparently been caught off-base again. After taking bows for an alleged early recruiting lead (which is like accepting congratulations on being seven points ahead at the half of a grudge football game) he watched in horror as other SWC teams overtook and passed his Red Raiders in late signings.

Did Jim take that lying down? No indeedy! He blamed the energy crisis. Just like any self-respecting Politician.

Ouch, Again!

Once again, however, the Raider Voice left a flank undefended. Lou Maysel, AustinSports Editor, did a little Research.

Listen to the drama.

Carlen, to Sports Illustrated: "We were hurt downstate this year. At the time we were recruiting so heavily, the nation was at the height of the gasoline shortage and, quite frankly, some of the kids and their parents were afraid they couldn't get out here or wouldn't be able to see their sons play."

Zeroing on Carlen's Alibi, ~~aysel~~ wrote, "Let's concentrate our attention on Tech's 26 recruits. A check on their hometowns indicates 17 are from places over 250 miles from Lubbock. Which means more than one tank of gas each way to make the trip in for Raider games." And, it also means that 65% of Tech's recruits came from "Downstate" while only 35% were gleaned in the Raider's West Texas BA~~CKYAR~~

Maysel observed: "The obvious place to turn for a quick comparison is last year's (1973) recruiting returns. Working against a limit of 45, instead of 30 as was the case this year, Tech brought in 16 from the immediate area and 27 from farther afield. Which figures out at a ration of 37 to 63%. Or, so close to what it was this year that Carlen's explanation loses some of its validity."

Touche!

An antique. Because of electricity.

The ice box melted from the scene when electric refrigerators appeared. The kerosene lamp faded into the past when electric lights began brightening every home.

Other electric appliances replaced the wash tub and scrub board, the flatiron and the wood-burning cookstove and eliminated the tiresome chore of hand-washing dishes, pots and pans.

Electricity. A vital part of everyday living in so many ways. And Texas Power and Light Company is doing its utmost to assure an adequate supply for essential needs.

Electricity. Still one of the biggest bargains in your budget.

Life Preserver Regulations Told

AUSTIN

There still seems to be some confusion regarding Personal Flotation Devices for recreational boats, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department water safety education officials.

Although the new law regarding PFDs went into effect October 1, 1973, many boat owners are still not sure what devices are needed on their boats.

All boats 16 feet or longer are required to have a Type, I, II, or III PFD for each person on board plus at least one Type IV throwable device. Boats under 16 feet in length are required to have one Type I, II, III or IV for each person on board. Any boat, regardless of size, must have a PFD aboard for all water skiers, even if they are being towed.

Also, all children 12 years of age or under must wear a life preserver at all times on boats less than 26 feet in length.

A Type I device, better known as a life preserve, contains more than 20 pounds of buoyancy and is designed to turn an unconscious wearer face-up in the water.

A Type II device, or buoyant vest, contains at least 15.5 pounds of buoyancy and will also turn an unconscious wearer face-up in the water.

A Type III, or special purpose device, contains at least 15.5 pounds of buoyancy, and is designed to keep a conscious person face up in the water, but may not turn an unconscious person face up.

Type IV is a throwable device, such as a buoyant cushion or ring buoy.

Wallet-sized cards explaining the regulations are available from: Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, Water Safety Education, John H. Reagan Building, Austin, Texas 78701.

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

by Vern Sanford

SPORTSMAN'S WEATHER GUIDE

When readying for an outing, whether a hunting, fishing or boating expedition, sportsmen become concerned about the weather.

After all, weather has much to do with the success of every outing, as well as the comfort of the sportsman.

Weather predictions aren't always correct, even by the weatherman, for conditions do suddenly change. That's why outdoorsmen often check age-old weather signs before submitting themselves to the elements.

Rain Indicators

These rain indicators are easy to recognize and usually are reliable:

1. A halo around the sun or moon means that rain is approaching.

2. So does smoke when it curls downward.

3. When clouds are low and accumulate in a web-like formation, rain is near.

4. When cumulus clouds acquire tufts, giving them the appearance of shell bursts, rain is indicated.

5. Beware if lightning is to the West or Northwest. A storm is probably coming your way.

Fair Weather Signs

1. When smoke curls upward and vanishes, fair weather is ahead.

2. When clouds are high and the air is dry, chances of rain are slim.

3. If it's storming to the East or South, and you can see lightning, the storm will probably pass you by.

SHARPENING THE KNIFE

Ever discover your knife was dull when you needed it most?

Be it a pocket knife or a hunting knife, there is one quick way to sharpen the blade. Simply remove your leather belt and use it as a strop.

If you have nothing to attach the buckle to, so you can use it like the barber does his strop, then stand on the buckle and pull up on the strop with one hand while you strop away with the other hand.

HANDY WORKSHOP STROP

A handy strop for your work shop, to sharpen steel knives, can be made by gluing an unfinished piece of leather to a piece of wood.

Length of the wood would be determined by the length of the leather. If a foot or more is available, glue the leather down tight, then bore a hole in the wood, about an inch from one end and hang the "sharpener" in a convenient spot by the work bench.

Equalizing Gas Supply

Wise boat owners who equip their large runabouts with high-powered, twin-engine outboards usually carry at least two spare tanks of gas—both ready for instant change.

Even wiser boat owners stop the craft after some 10 minutes out and substitute a fresh fuel tank for one of the active partially-emptied ones.

Reason is so that both of those big engines will not exhaust their gas supply at one and the same time, die simultaneously, and thus cause 100% loss of full power—instanter.

Don't say this will never happen, because it has—and there's no chill like the fear of an oncoming wake rolling over the transom of a fast moving outboard that's suddenly stalled in the middle of the lake.

Only other preventative is to stop after a short time out and add some gas to one of the active tanks—and only one—so as to maintain an unbalanced supply to the fuel line. Then only one engine at a time will lose its exhaust. The other will continue to furnish forward motion—thus to minimize the danger of swamping the boat.

Just remember that a speeding boat rides the crest of the waves. The faster it travels the shallower its trough. On the other hand a suddenly powerless boat drops low in the water and its trough dips deep. Add to that a low transom, no spillover panel, and a fast-moving, high-rolling, white-capped wake and you're in big trouble.

So be cautious, drive friendly at all times—and especially with others aboard.

Timely Bait Most Tempting

Each season brings with it certain insects—for example, Mayflies in the early Spring and grasshoppers in late Summer or early Fall.

Isn't it but natural that when these insects light or fall into the water that fish soon become aware of the new food possibilities.

Then what's more timely as a tempting bait?

A few minutes collecting such insects and using them for that purpose is bound to pay dividends.

Next best bet is an artificial lure as closely resembling that insect as man can make.

Save Anchor Scars

Some small boat anchors have a tendency to scratch or scar the finish of a boat. This is especially true when the anchor is stored carelessly, but it also happens when the anchor is lowered or raised.

It can be prevented in some cases by padding the sharp pointed ends of such anchors.

A rubber crutch tip on each end of hollow crossarms not only prevents damage to the boat but also keeps out mud and grime and helps prevent water collections and possible rust.

Bird Hunting Hours

Game Commissioners in most states feel that by permitting hunters to be out all day there is too much gunning pressure on the birds. Also it interferes with feeding time.

Hence they limit hunting to fixed hours, say 8 am - 2 pm instead of daylight to dark or from daylight to noon.

Hunting A Broken Quail Covey

Quail hunters following a broken covey that lights here and there as singles, often are puzzled to find that their dogs can't locate the birds, or blunder smack-dab into them with no chance to stand.

This happens because:

(1) An alighting quail usually hits the ground running and ends up a "fur piece" from the spot where it landed, and

(2) Your dog can't smell such a bird out because the newly-grounded quail has airwashed its body odor away in flight.

You can get around this by waiting patiently for about half an hour before going after the singles. This gives the birds time to regain the distinctive scent that dogs depend on.

In Appreciation

In a spirit of humility and appreciation, I wish to acknowledge and express my thanks to all who were so thoughtful, in sending cards and the visits of so many and especially for the prayers offered for my recovery from an illness that could have been quite serious. We owe a lots to the medical profession for the progress they have made in recent years, but I ams sure that your prayers in union with the medical profession have influenced God in his providence to restore health. I am convinced that more things are wrought by prayer than this world thinks of. It is therefore with a feeling of gratitude to God and a sincere thanks to all who haveen so thoughtful that I ask God's blessing upon you.

In Memory

In Memory of Jack Ingram Sr. on His Birthday April 19

Your gentle face and patient smile with sadness we recall
You had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all
The voice is mute and stilled the heart that loved us well and true,
Ah, bitter was the trial to part from one so good as you.
You are not forgotten loved one nor will you ever be,
As long as life and memory last we will remember you.
We miss you, our hearts are sore, as time goes on we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face,
No one can fill your vacant place.
We loved and miss you DADDY.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

BUSINESS AIRCRAFT: THE VITAL CONNECTING LINK

America's business leaders have long known that business aircraft are Main Street's link with the world of commerce and thereby help put new payrolls into non-metropolitan America. But, now, America's planners are realizing something equally important about business aircraft: They are essential links in the national transportation network!

According to the National Business Aircraft Association, an estimated 4.1 million business flights were conducted in 1972 to airports in the 48 contiguous states. More than half of all flights were either to interconnect with scheduled air carriers or to airports where there is no commercial air service. The total business aircraft flights to interconnect with air carriers numbered 1,219,864 flights, or 29.5 percent of all business aircraft flights. The total business flights to airports not served by any scheduled carrier numbered 1,172,264 flights, or 28.4 percent of all business aircraft flights.

Of the remaining 42.1 percent of all business flights, a high percentage of unknown dimension were made to and from airfields which have minimal commercial service ranging from one to two arrivals and departures per day.

Whether used for executive travel, staff travel, sales visits, carrying people to meetings, transporting customers, servicing remote installations, making high priority deliveries or patrolling utility lines, business aircraft are truly the enterprising businessman's catalyst, the multiplier of management's time and talent, and, as a consequence, the generator of jobs, payrolls and taxes.

The 38,000 business aircraft, in use since the beginning of 1973, are truly helping to bring America that much closer!

Brake-Through In Highway Safety

Joseph J. Mascuch, President of Breeze Corporations and holder of more than 50 patents, inspects new truck safety device made and marketed by the company.

Screeching of brakes... sirens...ambulances...cries of human beings—you've heard these before and sadly you'll hear them again. Highway safety practices are not what they're cracked up to be, they're worse. In latest annual statistics from the Bureau of Carrier Safety U.S. Department of Transportation, there were 49,751 reported accidents involving trucks. And the saddest part is that many of these accidents could have been avoided.

Now there's something new to help prevent many accidents caused when tractor trailers jacknife. A newly developed, patented, Breeze Jacknife Control has been designed to keep tractor trailer rigs straight in dangerous, jacknifing situations.

The device, invented by a Louisiana trucker and now produced and marketed by Breeze Corporations, Inc., of Union, N.J., has been tested on highways and unimproved roads for over two years with well over one million miles of highway use. According to Breeze, the Breeze Jacknife Control Unit is completely automatic, completely mechanical, requires minimum maintenance, no driver training is necessary and it imposes no restrictions on vehicle operation. In fact, drivers report that from a normal operation standpoint, they are not aware that the system is functioning.

The safety device consists of a braking mechanism, a cable drum, cable and retract spring and a heavy steel mounting plate bolted or welded to steel support beams or frames on the underside forward portion of the trailer. Connected to the trailer air service line brake system, the unit is activated instantly and automatically whenever brakes are applied.

The Breeze Unit has neither electrical nor electronic components, and requires no control other than the vehicle's own braking system. Once connected the safety device is in operation at all times, with no off-on switch or other action or attention ever required by the driver. Nor is there any need whatsoever to change driving procedures or institute any driver-education or training program to operate with the Jacknife Control Unit.

Someday, practicing highway safety may be a breeze!

One way to save more is proper storage of foods once you have them home. This is especially important for frozen foods. To retain the unique freshness and goodness of frozen vegetables, fruits and meats, they must be handled and stored properly. Those kept at Zero degrees or lower will retain their prime condition for longer periods of time.

I suggest that you equip your home freezer storage with a refrigerator-freezer thermometer so you can check the air temperature often. Adjust the control to bring the temperature as near 0°F as possible. Then tailor your buying and holding of frozen foods to your storage capabilities.

If your storage is in the "ice cube" section of a conventional one-door refrigerator, the temperature will probably range from +15°F to +20°F. Foods stored there should be used within a few days because there is some thawing at this temperature, even though the packages still feel hard.

If your storage is in a "frozen food compartment" of a conventional one-door refrigerator, the temperature will likely be in the +10°F to +15°F range. Food stored there will need to be used and replaced every few weeks.

If you put frozen foods in a well - insulated "freezer compartment" of a two-door combination refrigerator/freezer, the temperature should be 0°F or lower to +8°F. At +8°F you can count on flavor-fresh storage for several months.

If you add frozen foods to a separate home freezer chest or upright, the thermometer should be at 0°F or lower to permit you to enjoy a wide variety of frozen food for up to one year. A simple rule to remember is... the colder the storage air temperature, the longer you can store solidly frozen foods in "mint condition."

If you would like more information on storing frozen foods at home, please send me your name and address. Ask for the leaflet called "The Mark of Zero."
